decided to settle in the new area. He brought his family from Park City and settled in one of the nine houses along the ridge of the hill east of the mine building. Other homes were occupied by Archie Henderson, Will O'Brien, William Luke, Roy Pettie, Paul Hunt, William Fife, Ralph Stringham and George D. Blood. Later a house was built on the side of the road going down the ridge. Frank Hyde and later Harry Wallace, superintendent of the Park Utah Consolidated Mines, lived in this home. Another five families built homes in the canyon back of the mine building. These were Charles Welch, Al Ross, E. A. Hewitt, Robert Hyde and William Haueter. Mine buildings included an office, shops, boiler room, boarding house, commissary and two bunk houses. Later, two more bunk houses were built to accommodate the 500 to 600 men who came to the area in its boom days.

George A. Fisher, who did much of the land development in the area, supervised most of Keetley's growth. He built five modern homes, a combination store and gas station, and later an apartment house. He served as mayor of Keetley from the 1920's until his death in July, 1954. As mayor he directed the erection of an imposing school building.

Mr. Fisher, as mentioned earlier, also named the community in honor of Jack Keetley. This name created an interesting condition when postal service was inaugurated in the summer of 1923. Charles Roy Lenzi was named as postmaster and the service was very well received in the community. However, George Blood, acting superintendent of mines, discovered in the official community records that the town's name had been incorrectly recorded as "Keatley." A sign had even been placed over the post office with this incorrect spelling.

When the error was brought to the attention of the Postmaster General in Washington, he had to cancel the appointment of Charles Lenzi as postmaster, then recorded the name correctly and reappointed Mr. Lenzi as postmaster. This was done in November, 1923. Mr. Lenzi served continuously as Keetley's postmaster until 1952 when he retired and the post office was discontinued.

and Lettie Lenzi, his wife and assistant postmaster.

Charles Roy Lenzi, eldest son of Charles Henry Lenzi and Ada Booth, was born August 22, 1882, at Salt Lake City, Utah.

He moved with his family to Park City in July, 1897, and attended the public schools there. On March 23, 1905, he married Lettie May Wilson at Heber, Utah. She was a daughter of Thomas Wilson and Louisa Elizabeth Hardy, being born July 20, 1882, at Scipio, Millard County.

They made their home in Park City, where five children were born to them: Ethel, born January 5, 1906, married Robert Richard Sonntag; Louisa May, born May 26, 1908, married Ellsworth M. Satre; Wilson Roy, born February 7, 1910, married LaRae Lindsay; Dwight Earl, born August 13, 1916, married Melba Lindsay; and Ralph Vaughn, born August 8, 1922, passed away July 22, 1926, at Salt Lake City, Utah.

Roy's occupation was painting and paperhanging. In the year 1921 he went to Keetley, then known as the Ontario Drain Tunnel, to paint the cottages and mine buildings for the Park Utah Mining Company. In the spring of 1923, after the painting was completed, he bought the commissary from the Park Utah Mining Company and was appointed postmaster.

Roy acted as postmaster until he reached the retirement age of 70 years. He was retired August 31, 1952, and received a very fine citation from the postmaster general at Washington, D. C.

He moved to Salt Lake City, Utah, on September 23, 1953, where he and his wife
